

Bloomberg Businessweek Contents

February 28 — March 6, 2011
Bloomberg Businessweek

Grape expectations
Office gifting can be reduced to one of six bottles p76

Opening Remarks

8

All the tumult in Wisconsin obscures a serious message: Public employee negotiations really do need reconsidering, and even limiting collective bargaining is worth debating

Global Economics

11

Will the Saudis hold firm?
If the regime stays stable, it could make up for lost oil production in Libya. If not, the turmoil deepens

Don't bet on reform in Egypt p13
A recovery slowed by workers who accept low-paying jobs p14
China builds up its military-industrial complex p14
Venezuela's dollar drought p15
Tom Keene's EconoChat p15
Seven days ahead p16

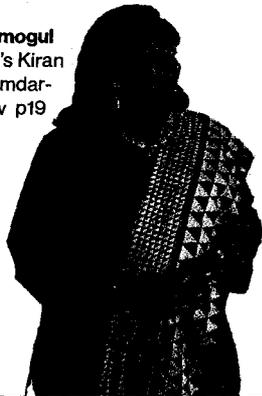

Companies & Industries

19

From beer to biotech
How an Indian brewer evolved into Biocon, Asia's top insulin producer and Pfizer's newest partner

Tullow Oil: Did continental drift create an oil bonanza? p20
Fighting high chocolate costs—by pumping in more air p21
Deborah Lloyd makes over
Kate Spade p23
So many home medical kits p24
Briefs p25

Drug mogul
Biocon's Kiran Mazumdar-Shaw p19

Politics & Policy

27

GE's hired guns
In tax conflicts past and present, it has a formidable array of lobbyists looking out for its interests

Defense's gravy train slows p28
Speed Dial: Tim Geithner p29
Nonworking spouses have a credit beef with the Fed p30
Balancing state budgets by selling or leasing assets p31

Technology

33

Stars, Stripes, Servers
SeaMicro actually makes its servers in Silicon Valley—and finds being stateside a boost for innovation

DAR.fm: Michael Robertson's bid to TiVo-ize radio p35
Alcatel-Lucent's tiny cell towers p35
The "localizers" making online games sparkle overseas p36
Innovator: Paul Graham's assembly line for startups p38

Markets & Finance

41

Ally's crowded rearview
In auto lending, GM is becoming more of a rival to its former financing subsidiary

Apartments are rising again p42
New rules on bankers' pay p43
Green Mountain is an expensive takeover target p44
Indexed annuities aren't always all they're cracked up to be p45
Bid & Ask: The week's deals p46
Charlie Rose/Nassim Taleb p47

In this corner ... Sports leagues are getting pummeled by Web pirates

Features

49

USA Inc.: Red, White, and Very Blue

By viewing the nation as a corporation, tech analyst Mary Meeker highlights some smart ways to shore up its battered—but fixable—bottom line p49

The Cautionary Tale of Rony Fuchs

When the Israeli investor struck a deal to collect $72 million from the Republic of Georgia, little did he know he was the fall guy in an elaborate sting p58

Unpaid Per View

Video pirates streaming games live are all over the Web and just about impossible to crush. They're giving the big leagues the fight of their lives p66

Etc.

73

Rebirth of a Nation

The Civil War sesquicentennial means a surge in battle reenactments—and the sales that go with them

Wine Your co-worker's cat died—pinot or Riesling? Gifting for all office occasions p76
Branding Yoga enjoys a patenting craze, giving new meaning to "yoga position" p78
One True Thing Hold the bacon panini: Brown-bagging it the healthy way p80
Hands On With a lithium-ion-powered bike, solar-charged lights, iPhone-linked dash, and other techie gear, you can be the geekiest commuter on two wheels p81
The Stack John Kasarda's Aerotropolis shows how modern airports and the new cities sprouting around them are changing global business—and our lives p82
Hard Choices How Diane von Furstenberg scaled the rarefied heights of fashion, licensed or sold it all away, and got her groove back p84