

Pollen Nation
American bees are staging
a comeback p26

Opening Remarks The GOP's new attempt to curtail regulators—the REINS Act—sounds sensible. But it could hamstring oversight of transportation, coal plants, even nukes. p10

Global Economics

12

Japan: The rebuilding

Contracts will be awarded "in quick order." Will well-connected construction giants have an unfair edge?

Why the yen is so strong p15

Fukushima's future p15

Supply chain reactions p17

Korean ships and steel:

Now in demand p18

Otis Elevator's quake tale p20

Libya's fallow billions

Private equity firms are beating a retreat from the Libyan Investment Authority's $70 billion. p23

A flurry of oil deals in Russia may signal a new era p24

Brazil: Rousseff's strong start p25

Tom Keene's EconoChat p25

U.S. bees bounce back p26

Seven days ahead p28

Companies & Industries

31

Wal-Mart's day in court

A huge bias class action against it, if allowed, could cost billions—and trigger similar suits elsewhere

Why Lexus is eating rivals' dust in China's luxury car market p32

Electrolux's plan for global appliance domination p33

Telling grocers what to sell p34

Briefs: GE, Amazon, more p35

Politics & Policy

37

Obamacare alternatives

While Republicans badly want to repeal the law, their search for cost cuts isn't proving so easy

Where the White House turns for real-time data: CEOs p38

In California, public radio is becoming more private p39

The anti-dollar-bill crusade p40

Charlie Rose/Barney Frank p41

Technology

43

AOL's cred quest

The company's new Palo Alto workspace is attracting tech startups and Stanford engineers

Removing the bottlenecks from virtual computing p44

AT&T says getting T-Mobile will let it expand 4G. We'll see p45

Innovator: Eye-tracking PCs p47

Markets & Finance

49

Investors, sit tight

Tinkering with your portfolio in response to the parade of scary headlines is a mug's game

Ana Botin's audition for the top spot at Banco Santander p50

The AT&T Deal: Another boost for Evercore Partners p51

Blankfein's testimony p52

Enterprise

57

As Asian factories get pickier about taking orders, American manufacturers are stepping up p57

Solar middlemen are making it easier for consumers to go green p58

Cash-flow squeeze: Caught between late payers and tight credit p59

Speed Dial: Pacific Trade International's Mei Xu p60

Aficionado Parsons hosting a jazz fundraiser in Harlem in February

Features

70

Building a Better Reactor

A new wave of nuclear plants is designed to withstand a Fukushima-style crisis. A few are already being built. Will Japan derail the renaissance? p70

Handbags at the Barricades

The family behind luxury icon Hermès is doing everything in its power to resist the advances of LVMH's Bernard Arnaut. Wish them luck p78

Captain Emergency

Why Dick Parsons keeps turning up at troubled companies—such as Dime Savings Bank, AOL Time Warner, and Citigroup p84

Etc.

93

What's the World Record for World Records?

Plucky URDB is threatening Guinness's half-century reign over the record-keeping business

Next Life From Hollywood agent to successful fashion line founder, the offbeat odyssey of Band of Outsiders' Scott Sternberg p96

How To Three simple steps to seducing a co-worker p97

Fashion Can anyone—stylists, producers, metrosexual jocks—save sports anchors from their abysmal taste in clothes? p98

The Stack Zach O'Malley Greenburg's book about rapper Jay-Z unintentionally raises a question: Is he a business guru or just a supremely talented pitchman? p100

Hard Choices DeMaurice Smith, head of the NFL Players Assn., on decertification p102