

CURRENT HISTORY

April 2011

Vol. 110, No. 735

CONTENTS

- 131 A Tale of Two Manmohan Singhs Indrani Bagchi
Rightly credited with unshackling India's economy when he was finance minister in the early 1990s, Singh as prime minister has failed to counter corruption and govern decisively.
- 136 Pakistan's Security-Governance Challenge C. Christine Fair
The nation's lavishly supplied army and intelligence services nurture Islamist outlaws, while police are horribly trained and equipped. This is no recipe for security.
- 143 India's Baby Boomers: Dividend or Disaster? David E. Bloom
Whether millions of working-age Indians drive growth or discontent will depend on whether policies assure they are productively employed. Seventh in a series on demographic dilemmas.
- 150 Will America Lose Afghanistan—Again? Gary M. Bowman
Barack Obama is still burdened by his predecessor's strategic blunders, and starting a withdrawal soon might concede the country to the Taliban.
- 156 Why India Is Becoming Warier of China Shashank Joshi
Beijing's recent assertiveness in Asia has bolstered hard-liners in Delhi's strategic community who are convinced that China is intent on impeding India's rise.

PERSPECTIVE

- 162 Shooting for a Century:
The India-Pakistan Conundrum Stephen P. Cohen
What prevents South Asia's two largest nations from resolving a conflict that threatens to persist for decades more? Hint: Kashmir is not the root of the problem.

BOOKS

- 165 When India Starved and Britain Stood By Sumit Ganguly
A new book documents a tragic episode during World War II, when Winston Churchill could not be bothered to prevent starvation that killed nearly 4 million Indians.

THE MONTH IN REVIEW

- 167 February 2011
An international chronology of events in February, country by country, day by day.
