

Note from the Editor 2
 MICHAEL MCGRATH

Essays

Play and Public Life 3
 ALISON KADLEC

What can public engagement practitioners and advocates of citizen-centered politics learn from the science of play? An expert on public deliberation interviews Stuart Brown, a leading researcher on the theory of play.

Is Getting into the Community Garden Business a Good Way to Engage Citizens in Local Government? 12
 BETHANY RUBIN HENDERSON, KIMBERLY HARTSFIELD

Community gardens are an appealing way of encouraging participation in community life, but getting the details right can make the difference between success and failure.

Educating Students and Strengthening Communities: The 2009 MetLife Ambassadors In Education 18
 GLORIA RUBIO-CORTÉS, MICHAEL MCGRATH

Twenty-five educators who are building bridges between their schools and communities.

Youth Participation in Public Policy at the Local Level: New Lessons from Michigan Municipalities 26
 KATIE RICHARDS-SCHUSTER, BARRY CHECKOWAY

Michigan has a reputation for its network of youth civic engagement programs. How effective are these community-based efforts and what lessons can we learn from them?

Block Building: Cure for Crime, Conflicts, and Maybe Even City Budgets 31
 DOUG LINKHART

Knowing our neighbors can improve the safety, quality, financial well-being, and healthiness of our communities. Can block organizing also help cities deal with the fiscal constraints that so many are facing?

Listening to Democracy's Next Generation: Using Web Dialogue to Connect Lawmakers and Students 36

KRISTEN J. AMUNDSON, LAURIE E. MAAK, KELLY M. SHARBEL

How students in Virginia are using the Internet to converse with elected officials and learn about public policy decisions.

Departments

CIVIC ENGAGEMENT

Systemwide Collaboration and Community Service: The Kansas Corps Experiment 41
 CURT BRUNGARDT, CHANTELE S. ARNOLD

A statewide initiative in Kansas is tapping into an important underused community resource—the volunteer power of colleges and universities.

COMMUNITY BUILDING

Hope from the Debris: Greensburg GreenTown's Tools for Building Community and a Green Movement After a Natural Disaster 45
 BENJAMIN KAPNIK

A small Kansas city is recovering from a devastating tornado by rebuilding as a model green community.

POLITICAL REFORM

The Top-Two Primary in Washington State 49
 KRISTAL E. NOGA-STYRON

An unusual state primary system lets voters choose among all candidates running for office. The top-two vote getters—regardless of party affiliation—advance to the general election in November.