

PARAMETERS

Vol. XXXX, No. 2

Summer 2010

- War—Continuity in Change, and Change in Continuity 5
Colin S. Gray
An examination of how future war will include both change and continuity from the past.
- The Afghanistan-Pakistan Conundrum
- An Appraisal of the Afghanistan-Pakistan Strategy to Counter Terrorism 14
Malik Zafar Iqbal
The insider's view of current relations between the two nations and prospects for future operations in Afghanistan.
- Time for a Strategic and Intellectual Pause in Afghanistan 33
Raymond A. Millen
Three misconceptions impacting the future of operations in Afghanistan, and a call for a new strategic approach.
- Positive Perceptions to Sustain the US-Pakistan Relationships 46
Randall L. Koehlmoos
An examination of the reasons for the current mistrust between the two nations and recommendations for confidence building measures.
- A Counter-WMD Strategy for the Future 58
Albert J. Mauroni
It is time for the US government, and the Department of Defense in particular, to review its strategy to combat weapons of mass destruction.
- Soldiers and Politics: Exposing Some Myths 74
Phillip S. Meilinger
The American military has been anything but politically neutral throughout its history.
- The North Caucasus: Russian Roulette on Europe's Borders 87
Constance A. Phlipot
Russian analysts warn that Russia "is losing" the North Caucasus to Islamic fundamentalists.
- Google Confronts China's "Three Warfares" 101
Timothy L. Thomas
China's computer attack on Google in January of 2010 may only be a first step in terms of Chinese aggression and future war.